Economer, in reference to Mr. Johnson, we will not mortify them by the publication of their names. They know whether they can see themselves in our looking-glass or not. We would add, only that the few to whom we allude that side, now here and now there, but Secretaries of the Boards of Trade at that side, now here and now there, but only, that the few to whom we allude are among our prominent citizens.

Now let it be noted that everything that Mr. Johnson had done bad was behind 1868. All of the objectionable portion of his public conduct transpired previous to 1868, and these consistent gentlemen come along and vote—unanimously for the above resolutions. Verily,
